PRESS RELEASE
UONGOZI INSTITUTE'S WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME TO BE LAUNCHED TODAY

20 June, 2022: Our new Women's Leadership Programme, dedicated to helping women advance into leadership roles, will be launched today at the Julius Nyerere International Convention Centre, Dar es Salaam.

The event will be officiated by the Minister of State, President's Office – Public Service Management and Good Governance, Hon. Jenista Mhagama (MP).

The programme will begin with 50 senior and emerging leaders from the public sector. It will be rolled out to other sectors later on.

Participants will benefit from unparalleled learning opportunities, including the Women's Leadership Forum in which they will engage in a broader discussion with eminent leaders. Among others, they will have an opportunity to borrow techniques to overcome barriers to climbing the leadership ladder in their organisations and sectors. Other components of the programme are training, coaching and networking opportunities. These hone in on participants' ability to manage their inner selves (personal leadership), lead others (people leadership), and harness resources (organisational leadership).

"In 2019, we conducted a baseline study on the status of women in leadership positions in Tanzania, focusing on the public sector. The study suggested that proportion of women in leadership positions was three times lower than that of men. With this programme, we hope to contribute to creating a balanced distribution between the genders," says Kadari Singo, CEO of UONGOZI Institute.

Participation in the launching ceremony will be by invitation only.
